Chapter 1 by Double_A

It was around midnight.

Alice Millers stayed up at night, trying to get some work done. She was a programmer at a government office.

She couldn't sleep, thanks to the loud thunderstorm outside. The mansion's power going out didn't bother her much as power outages were common when storms comes around. She continued working on her laptop in the dark room.

After a few minutes she decided to go down to the kitchen to get something to snack on. She switched on her mobile's flashlight to get to the kitchen.

She only opened the door a little bit when she noticed light and several footsteps in the living room. Four men walked up the stairs to her parents' room. they kicked open the door and dragged her parents downstairs.

She quickly scrambled throughout the room for something to defend myself with. The two cans of energy drinks she drank had her on edge. She found the Swiss army knife her cousin Drew gifted her in my bedside drawer. She quickly grabbed it and slowly made her way outside her room.

Two men heard the racket she made in the room and came upstairs only to find her with a knife in one hand and her mobile in the other. She tried to walk to the stairs holding the knife out and looking behind, so she missed the

In her living room, there was a large rug. She tried to run with the men in pursuit. She fell on the floor unconscious. A large guy came in. He dragged her over to a couch and seated her on it. Then he pointed a gun at her.
